Note that many of these cemeteries are in varying degrees of poor condition from years of neglect and the natural deterioration of gravestones made from a wide range of qualities. Exacerbating their deterioration are the methods used during their installation, especially the superglue of the day; sulfur*, seen in this example to the left.*

Most of these small cemeteries are located on private property. If you are a cemetery visitor, be considerate not to trespass and seek permission from the land owner before going to the cemetery.

As noted, this list of known cemeteries is date stamped and isn't necessarily complete. If you have personal knowledge of a cemetery located in Sullivan that's not included in the above list, please let me know by email (vkbellis@gmail.com) and I'll be sure to include it when this map gets updated next. You're also encouraged to let the folks at Maine Old Cemetery Association (MOCA) - https://moca-me.org/contact - know about any newly discovered cemeteries or ancient burial grounds. Also check out https://moca-me.org/cemeteries.

MOCA is an excellent resource with modest membership dues starting at only $10/yr. The entirely volunteer run organization hosts various events including 4-day Preservation Workshops throughout Maine featuring the the absolute best tradesman in the business, Joe Ferrannini, Conservator, of Grave Stone Matters, Hoosick Falls, NY. These hands-on in-cemetery classes are essential if you're considering any of the following: cleaning, preservation, conservation, and restoration.
